

International Women's Day at the NCC

Name: Rachael Woodburn

Job role: Head of HR

Nationality: British

Three things I love about my role are:

- The variety (no two days are ever the same in HR)
- The autonomy (I'm given the trust and support to do the job my way)
- Working with brilliantly motivated and intelligent people right across the NCC

"I wasn't actively looking for a new job at the time but was contacted by our then Recruitment Manager, Giles, who sold me the dream about how great it is to work at NCC. That was six years ago and I can easily say that making the move to NCC was one of the best decisions I ever made.

"I find Chimamanda Ngozi Adichie very inspiring. Chimamanda writes and speaks about feminism beautifully and with great humour. Listening to her TED Talk is what really triggered me to think about, learn about and advocate for feminism."

"In one of my first jobs someone told me that I should just 'stay quiet and keep my head down'. If I had one piece of advice to give my younger self it would be to completely ignore that advice, and that it's okay for women to speak up, to challenge and to rock the boat."
